Queen's Bridge, which spans the river Lagan close to the terminus of the County Down Railway, was opened in 1841, and widened in 1886. It contains five arches of 50 feet span each. On the same site formerly stood the "Great Bridge of Belfast," which was founded in 1682 and suffered considerable damage from the passage of Shomberg's cannon in 1689. From the bridge a fine view of Belfast's magnificent line of quays can be obtained.
